ZoomInfo, which won the award for the second consecutive year, supports the environment, local communities, and employees in a number of ways:

- In addition to being a nearly paperless company worldwide,

ZoomInfo reduces e-waste in landfills – and helps close the digital divide – by repurposing used electronics and donating them to those in need.

- A shift to renewable energy sources has helped the company offset its carbon impact, reducing its net emissions per $1 million of revenue by 46%.
- The company takes an active role in the equity, advancement, and empowerment of its employees by funding ZoomInclusion Employee Resource Groups. These groups host educational and philanthropic events to promote an inclusive workplace and community.
- ZoomInfo donates platform access and partners with employees to contribute more than $1 million to worthy organizations positively impacting the communities where its employees live and work.
- The company provides opportunities for employees to volunteer time to causes they care about.

TrustRadius, a buyer intelligence platform for business technology, determines recipients of the award by evaluating companies' efforts across these categories:

- Sustainability and the environment
- Volunteerism
- Diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI)
- Generous donations
- Community impact
- Employee well-being and development
- Support for women in technology
- Education support
